OFFICE OF RESEARCH

Each bill passed by the Legislature shall be presented to the Governor. It becomes a statute if it is signed by the Governor. The Governor may veto it by returning it with any objections to the house of origin, which shall enter the objections in the journal and proceed to reconsider it. If a Governor does not sign and does not veto, the bill becomes law.

California Constitution, Article IV, §10 (a)

- > In 1979 and 1980, the Legislature overrode the governor's veto of two bills and eight items in the budget bill. Prior to these overrides, the governor's veto had been overridden on only two occasions since 1973. The Legislature has not overridden a governor's veto since 1980.
- > This year, Governor Brown vetoed 16.5% of bills, his highest veto percentage as governor, followed by the second year of his fourth term (15% in 2016), and the first year of his third term (14.4% in 2011).
- > This year, Brown considered 1,217 bills, the highest number of bills in his third and fourth terms as governor; he considered 1,074 bills in 2014 and 1,059 in 2016. During his first two terms, Brown considered more bills in each of those years than during any year in his third and fourth terms.
- > During his 16 years as governor, Brown has vetoed 8.4% of the 19,436 bills he has considered; 17,813 bills have been chaptered and 1,623 bills have been vetoed.
- > During his third and fourth terms as governor, Brown allowed four bills to become law without his signature.
- > Governor Brown's average veto rate (13.5%) during his last two terms (2011–18) is nearly triple his average veto rate during his first two terms (4.6%).
- > In 1982, Governor Brown vetoed just 30 of the 1,674 bills he considered, setting the record for the lowest number of vetoes and the lowest veto rate (1.8%).
- > Governor Pat Brown considered 9,383 bills during his two terms in office (1959–66). He vetoed (including "pocket vetoes") 671 bills, or about 7.2%.<sup>1</sup>
- > The five years with the highest number of chaptered bills were all with Republican governors (1971, 1984, 1967, 1990, 1988). Four of the five years with the highest number of vetoed bills (1990, 2008, 1988, 2000, 1998) were with Republican governors (the exception was Governor Davis in 2000).
- > Governor Deukmejian holds the record for the most bills vetoed in a year, 436 (1990); Governor Schwarzenegger is next with 414 vetoes (2008).
- > Governor Schwarzenegger vetoed more than a quarter (26.4%) of the 7,461 bills that he considered over his seven years in office. He signed the lowest average number of bills per year (784 per year over seven years).
- > Of the last five governors, three vetoed the most bills of their tenures, both by percentage and absolute number, in their final year in office (Brown in 2018, Wilson in 1998, and Deukmejian in 1990).

<sup>1</sup> From 1849 until the voters passed Proposition 1A (1966), governors could stop bills from becoming law by holding onto them. Proposition 1A ended the use of the so-called "pocket veto" by amending the California Constitution. If the governor neither signs nor vetoes a bill, the bill becomes law and is considered "chaptered."

CHAPTERED AND VETOED BILLS: 1967-2018

Notes

For nearly all the years from 1967 through 2018, this report counts only the bills from regular sessions, not the bills from extraordinary sessions. The exception is for 2015 and 2016 where the information also includes extraordinary session bills.

The “chaptered bills” column on pages 3–4 includes bills that a governor allowed to become law without signature. See California Constitution, Article IV, §10 (b)(3). For example, in 2000, Governor Davis signed 1,088 bills and allowed four measures to become law without his signature, for a total of 1,092 chaptered bills. In 2011, Governor Brown allowed one bill to become law without his signature. In 2014, Governor Brown allowed one bill to become law without his signature. In 2016, Governor Brown allowed two bills to become law without his signature.

For 2010, the “chaptered bills” column on page 4 includes four bills signed by Lieutenant Governor Abel Maldonado, as acting governor.

In the 1990s, each house of the Legislature introduced “bill limits” for each member. Currently, the limit in a two-year session is set at 40 bills in the Senate and 50 bills in the Assembly. In the Senate, the limit doesn’t apply to a constitutional amendment or any type of resolution. In the Assembly, the limit applies to a constitutional amendment but not to a resolution. In both the Senate and the Assembly, the limit may be suspended with respect to a particular bill by approval of the Committee on Rules.

The number of chaptered bills comes from the bound statutes for each year, plus information from the Office of the Governor. The number of vetoes comes from file records kept in the Office of the Governor. Robert Williams, deputy legislative secretary to the governor in several administrations, started the files in the 1950s. In subsequent administrations, the governor’s legislative staff has maintained the files that Williams started. See the next page for the sources.

The information on bills considered by Governor Pat Brown (1959-66) was assembled by the research librarians of the California State Library using the Senate and Assembly final histories publications.
