How Often Do Governors Say No?

Each bill passed by the Legislature shall be presented to the Governor. It becomes a statute if it is signed by the Governor. The Governor may veto it by returning it with any objections to the house of origin, which shall enter the objections in the journal and proceed to reconsider it. If a Governor does not sign and does not veto, the bill becomes law.

California Constitution, Article IV, §10 (a)

- This year, Governor Brown vetoed his second highest percentage of bills (14.13%) since returning to office in 2010. His highest veto percentage was the first year of his third term (14.37% in 2011).
- During his most recent five years in office, Governor Brown has vetoed 12.9% of the 4,777 bills he has considered.
- Governor Brown's average veto rate (12.9%) during his current term (2011–15) is higher than his veto rate during his first two terms (4.63%).
- In his 13 years as Governor (1975–82 and 2011–15), Brown has considered 16,183 bills and vetoed 1,145 bills, or 7% of all bills considered.
- This year, Governor Brown considered 941 bills, the third lowest number he has considered since beginning his third term; he considered 870 bills in 2011 and 896 bills in 2013.
- Governor Schwarzenegger vetoed more than a quarter (26.40%) of the 7,461 bills that reached him over his seven years in office. He signed the lowest average number of bills per year (784 a year over seven years).
- This year, of the 133 bills Governor Brown vetoed, he vetoed 14 bills with messages and used his “blue pencil” authority in one bill (the Budget bill).
- In 1982, Governor Brown vetoed just 30 bills of the 1,674 he considered, setting the record for the lowest number of vetoes and the lowest veto rate (1.79%).
- Governor Pat Brown acted on about 7,500 bills during his two terms in office (1958–66). He vetoed (including “pocket vetoes”¹) 512 bills, or about 6%.
- Governor Deukmejian vetoed the most bills (2,298 bills over eight years). However, with 1,970 vetoes over his seven years in office, Governor Schwarzenegger's annual veto average (281) is close to Governor Deukmejian's annual average of 287 vetoes per year.
- In his five years in office, Governor Davis vetoed more bills (1,098) than Governor Brown has in the past five years (617).
- The five years with the highest number of chaptered bills were all with Republican governors (1971, 1984, 1967, 1990, 1988). Four of the five years with the highest number of vetoed bills (1990, 2008, 1988, 2000, 1998) were Republican governors (the exception was Governor Davis in 2000).
- Governor Deukmejian holds the record for the most bills vetoed in a year, 436 (1990); Governor Schwarzenegger is next with 414 vetoes (2008).

¹ From 1849 until the voters passed Proposition 1A (1966), governors could stop bills from becoming law by holding onto them. Proposition 1A ended the use of the so-called “pocket veto” by amending the California Constitution. If the Governor neither signs nor vetoes a bill, the bill becomes law and is considered “chaptered.”

CHAPTERED AND VETOED BILLS: 1967–2015

Notes

This information, from 1967 through 2015, counts only the bills from Regular Sessions, not the bills in Extraordinary Sessions. For 2015, there was one bill chaptered in the Extraordinary session, which is included.

The “Chaptered Bills” column on page 3 includes bills that a governor allowed to become law without signature. See California Constitution, Article IV, §10 (b)(3). For example, in 2000, Governor Davis signed 1,088 bills and allowed four measures to become law without his signature, for a total of 1,092 chaptered bills. In 2011, Governor Brown allowed one bill to become law without his signature. In 2014, Governor Brown allowed one bill to become law without his signature.

For 2010, the “Chaptered Bills” column on page 3 includes four bills signed by Lieutenant Governor Abel Maldonado, as Acting Governor.

In the 1990s, each house of the Legislature introduced “bill limits” for each member. Currently, the limit is set at 40 bills in a two-year session.

The number of chaptered bills comes from the bound statutes for each year, plus information from the Office of the Governor. The number of vetoes comes from file records kept in the Office of the Governor. Robert Williams, Deputy Legislative Secretary to the Governor in several administrations, started those files in the 1950s. In subsequent administrations, the Governor’s legislative staff has maintained the files that Williams started. See the next page for the sources.
